

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

The fact that a single corporation with such a blatant political agenda can force that agenda on such a large portion of our population without any accountability or, at the very least, without having to offer the other side of the issue is truly frightening.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
